The Canadian government was acting to “ensure the safety and security of the country.” As for the GAT, this group has been active in Montreal for several years, according to the Quebec court which has sentenced Gaudet. The two leaders of the group, Jacques Beaulieu and Yannick Bisson, have been sentenced to 10 and 18 years in prison, respectively. The theme was built in 3 phases: the first one was when Bing Earth Day Windows 7 Theme was just born, so we needed about a month to collect enough images. The second phase was to gather and test as many photos as we could - we had an incredible amount. There was a month of work, not only collecting and testing new photos but also trying to edit the existing ones to match the categories of the theme. We ended up with about 400 images in the two categories: Earth and Animals. Last but not least, we needed about two months to reach a stable final version. The entire work was done in a small team, every member of which dedicated hours of their own time and energy to accomplish the task. High voltage direct current (HVDC) transmission systems are typically designed for a specific voltage range, e.g., 15 kV to 33 kV. For voltages greater than 33 kV, capacitors are used to shunt the lines to limit the voltage on the transmission lines. Since many HVDC transmission systems operate at voltages greater than 33 kV, a voltage rating capacitor is typically selected to operate at the rated voltage. These large capacitors are relatively expensive, require space in the substation or a capacitor bank. There are many applications where a HVDC transmission system operates at voltages greater than 33 kV, but the application has limitations with regard to the length of the lines, and thus the voltage, that can be safely operated. For example, a HVDC transmission system operating at 35 kV would not be viable to operate at the full length of the transmission line.
